

Disneyland to Drop Indoor Mask Mandate for Vaccinated Visitors

Walt Disney Co. is dropping a mask mandate for fully vaccinated guests to its theme parks in the US. Face coverings will become optional for inoculated visitors in both outdoor and indoor locations from Thursday. Masks will remain mandatory for those who are not fully vaccinated. Disney World's website cited "recent trends and regulatory guidance" for the shift. Disneyland in California will also introduce similar measures. The decision comes just days after Universal Orlando ditched its mask requirement. The Coachella and Stagecoach music festivals also said this week that they are dropping Covid mandate for the events, due to be held in April. Festival-goers won't be required to be vaccinated.
